THE WILLIAMS OF BAKER COUNTY

Foreword

In the following pages is outlined a brief sketch of the history and the geneology record of one of the most unique and interesting families in the history of Baker County, unique in that it is probably the largest family in the Caucasian era of the county, with the largest number of descendants, all being the off-spring from one man, one John Daniel Williams, (Grandfather Jocham) a Confederate Veteran in the War Between the States, an outstanding citizen and a pioneer settler of the County. Unique in that a goodly number of the descendants who have distinguished themselves in social, civic and business realms still retain the memory of the noble ideals and traditions of their ancestors from the horse-and-buggy days, yes from the oxcart and tallow candle days down to modern times of atomic energy, rocket flight and space travel.

Although this man, John Daniel Williams passed way only a little more than half a century ago and although he has one daughter still living at this writing, so numerous are his offsprings on the face of the earth today, that we are sure that if each and every one should carry a blossom to his grave yonder on the banks of the middle prong of the St. Mary's River, his mortal remains which have long ago turned to dust, would tonight repose beneath a wilderness of flowers! This is most solemnly attested each year by the assemblage at the family reunion at Ocean Pond near Olustee, Florida. Here they come as the array of a grand army from many sections of the State, the Prevatts from Folkston, Georgia, the Picketts from Pickettville, Florida. Williams descendants from Miami, Florida and many others. This noble family soon intertwined itself in marriage with all the leading families of the county, then when these were exhausted, began to marry the descendants in other families, so we feel that Carlyle's adage, "Just a little touch of Nature makes the whole world kin" is very fitting in this connection.

Then when we reflect upon the memory not only of our noble Ancestor Grandfather Jocham, a hard working man who believed in the dignity of labor as the crown of honor, but also of Uncle Bill Williams, who like Lincoln seemed to have a joke or story for every occasion, and of Uncle Lew Williams a devout neighborly man, and of Uncle General Williams, a man musically inclined, of Uncle Buddy a devout religious man, of Uncle Torry Williams, a man fixed as steadfast as a rock in the views of his faith and contended that one called and chosen to the election of God's grace would always live to get there and you couldn't kill him with a sledge hammer, and finally of Uncle Carrol Thompson, of Uncle Henry Williams and Uncle John Williams all shrewd business managers, it becomes our steadfast conviction that we shoud have this record. We need it as a census of enumeration to ascertain the number of descendants in this noble and interesting family. Also, many of the descendants do not know who some of their relatives are, they do not know as to the whereabouts and welfare of some of their family. We are bound by God's Holy Word, by the law of loyalty and consanguinity, and finally by the law of justice and humanity to be concerned with the happiness and the welfare of those to whom we are related by blood, and the household of faith. For what are men better than sheep or goats that lead a blind life within the brain, if knowing God we lift not hands of prayer for those whom we call neighbors, kindred and friends! Most of us were fortunate indeed to have had noble parents and grandparents, who served their country well in war and peace, whose presence was once so nobly inspiring and precious to our hearts, but who one by one passed away leaving us their descendants to battle and struggle on in a world of upheaval and change unparalleled in all former history, especially in the last quarter of a century.

Finally we felt that the time had come when we as a mighty, progressive and interesting family should be drawn closer together in the bonds of unity, sympathy, knowledge of relationship and association, one with another. We felt that the time had come for the fulfillment of the prophecy that in the last days, He would send the Prophet Elias who would turn the hearts of the children unto the fathers and the fathers to the children, and that we should thus be made to be vitally concerned in the welfare of our relative kindred and the household of faith, and the looking forward to and hastening of the time when there shall be one Shepherd and one Fold.

Chapter I

The Coming of Grandfather Jocham

In a beautiful park near the Lake City Highway, not far distant from Ocean Pond, the original home of the Williams Family Reunion, there stands a monument commemorating a famous War that once occurred in this land known as the Civil War, the War of Rebellion or War Between the States. In that war many of the pioneer sons of the beloved Southland rendered their service, their sacrifice and in the words of President Lincoln. "their last full measure of devotion." Among them there went a man from Baker County by the name of John Daniel Williams, better known as Uncle Jocham Williams, along with two sons, Uncle Bud and Uncle Bill as well as two sons-in-law, Uncle Bud Harvey and Uncle Jim Prevatt, the latter losing his life in the struggle as we obtained from later statistics from our Nation's Capitol.

This Man, Jocham Williams, according to the records that we have been able to obtain, seems to have been born in what is now Bryant County, Georgia, near Pembroke, about the year 1813 or 1814. He seems to have migrated to what is now Baker County as a very young man, along with his parents, William and Sarah Williams, who settled in what was then probably part of Columbia County, but now Baker County. The latter being formed from New River County in 1861. Bradford and Union were later formed from New River and the name New River abolished.

We regret not being able to state just when he first came to Baker County, but it must have been prior to his entrance into the Indian Wars of territorial days, for in his letters that we have read, he contends always to have been a citizen of the Sanderson community of Baker County. He built his home near the middle prong of the St. Mary's River, on what was later known as the Old Suse Williams Place. He served his country as soldier and petty officer in the Indian wars between the years 1835 and 1842. Of his record in this war, we have the following official letter from Washington:

TREASURY DEPARTMENT—Second Auditor's Report
Washington, D. C., October 23, 1889.

The Muster-roll of Captain Bird's Florida Mounted Volunteers of 1840 reports, John D. Williams enrolled Nov. 9, 1838 and was discharged May 14, 1840. No record of wounds, sickness or disability.

There was also an application for reimbursement of expenses for last sickness, medicine, physician, nursing care and funeral expenses for Georgia Ann Williams, who died, Jan. 18, 1918. Buried in Taylor Cemetery. Applied for by a Jackson J. Williams.

It is also clearly evident that he served in the Civil War or the War Between the States, but we have not been able to obtain as complete a record of his services in that War as in the territorial Indian Wars. At the beginning of the Family Re-union, we conceived the idea of having a tombstone erected at his grave, showing his rank in the Civil War. Through the kindly assistance of our noble Congressman, the Hon. Charles E. Bennett, we were able to secure a Government stone showing his record. Which record on the stone is as follows:

S G T
CO K
2nd Reg. Florida Cav.
C. S. A.
1821—1896

Translation, I suppose, Sergeant in Company K of the Second Regiment of Florida Cavaliers, Confederate States of America.

Please note there seems to be an error on the stone as to date of his birth. All later statistics show his birth date to have been not later than the year 1814. We of course sent in these figures from the original tombstone. We had wondered why the family did not have a Government stone placed there at the beginning. It was probably because he was buried in a private cemetery or they were unable to get one from the government at that time.

This man Jocham Williams was twice married, his first marriage being with a Mrs. Rebecca (Sweat) Williams from which union there came 13 children, his second union with a Mrs. Georgia Ann (Rewis, Anderson) Williams of whom were born eight children. The latter wife was the widow of Malachi or Mack Anderson. In this union there were also five children from the best census we can get: namely, James or Jacob Anderson, Robert, John and George Anderson and a daughter, Martha. So it seems that Grandmother Rebecca and Georgia Ann were mothers of thirteen children each.

Although this man Jocham Williams passed away, little more than a half a century ago, so numerous today are his offsprings on the face of the earth that it is our conviction that if each and every one should take a blossom to his grave, his mortal remains long ago turned to dust, would tonight repose beneath a wilderness of flowers! We have found them as far South as Miami, Hollywood and the Everglades, as far north as Chicago and New York and as far west as New Orleans and Texas.

We cannot say positively as to who the parents of Jocham Williams were. However, Mrs. Ernestine Waring of Lakeland, Florida, who is making a research in the ancestral geneology believes that one, William Williams and wife, Sarah, former residents of Columbia County are his real parents. She believes this for three reasons: first, they all lived there together at one time, and they were old enough to be his parents, second, they lived very near together, and third, Grandfather Jocham named his first child Sarah, who might well have been named for its grandmother, wife of William Williams. Later on, I believe he also named a son, William, which could have been after his grandfather. Then in my latest conversation with Cousin Lettie Rhoden, an heir of Uncle Bud Williams, oldest son of Grandfather Jocham, she confirmed that this was the name of her father's grandfather, that she had heard him say so many times.

Then other names she listed there as follows: a Roland Williams, Julius Williams and Isaac Williams. These were probably some of his brothers. It is remembered that he made mention of one brother, who came with him in pioneer days whom he referred to as "Bloody" Williams.

It seems that he had been in several Indian skirmishes, and managed to escape unhurt. Grandfather said he was always afraid to stop over with him in camp, lest he might engage in fight before they could get away. If anyone is interested in further research of the geneology of our ancestors, you might consult Mrs. Waring as to her later findings. Her address is 104 1-2 Florida Avenue, Lakeland, Florida.

We found a book on geneological research by Worth S. Ray in which he says and I quote: "The Williams family, doubtless of Welsh descent settled on Queen's Creek in York County, Virginia, prior to 1645". So you see this was not long after the first settlement by the English at Jamestown in 1607. And quite a while before the settlement of Rhode Island by Roger Williams in 1681. According to Judge Hucksford of Homerville Ga., the Williams family came into the Carolinas and Georgia about the middle of the 18th century. The name "Williams" in its plural form seems to have been coined in England or Wales at some time between the discovery of America and the coming of the English. We are unable to say whether the name "William" itself is of Anglo-Saxon or old German origin. But the old Saxon had the form "Wilmin," the Dutch "Wilhem" and the German "Wilhelm" which form they still use, signiifying the one that is determined to hold or will hold, that is, the helm, rule or reigns of government. So the literal meaning of the word seems to imply a headstrong, determined or stubborn disposition. Whether this might be properly applied to any of the Williamses or their descendants from Baker County, you be the judge. It seems that it did apply in history to Duke William who was determined to be King of England, and King he did become. And to Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany who was determined to rule the world, but he never did.

We speak now of Grandmother Becky, first wife of Jocham Williams. According to our findings, she was the daughter of Abner and Rebecca Sweat. The said Rebecca Sweat herself being the daughter of a John and Mary Anderson. If anyone be interested in further geneology of this family, you might consult with a Mrs. Leila French of 1252 Labelle St., Jacksonville, Florida, who is compiling a geneology of ancestors and descendants of the Sweat family.

Grandmother Becky was the mother of thirteen children. Her firstborn, Sarah seems to have been born about the year 1834. This was the first evidence we found that Grandfather was born before the year 1821. Wasn't likely in those days, we don't think, for a twelve or thirteen year lad to be head of a family and father of a child. Sarah herself came to be progenitor of a branch of the Crews Family. A very noble family and also of the famous Prevatt family whose descendants are very numerous. One of her descendants, namely, Elizabeth Prevatt, is still living at this writing, having long ago reached the Century Mark and today, probably 105 or 106 according to census reports from Washington. She lives with her grandson, Collee Prevatt at McAlpin, Florida. Grandma Becky's other children, Elias, William, John C., James J., Llewellyn, Elizabeth, Eliza, Caroline, Nancy, Polly Ann, Martha Lee and Charity.

It seems that she was also the guardian of a sister Mary, who later married a John Cooper Herndon and came to be the progenitor of the Johnsons, Herndons and others of Baker County. She was also guardian of a brother, James Sweat, who is remembered as being very fond of honey. Somebody told Richard Davis and he told me that he could eat more honey than anyone they had ever heard tell of. He drove an ox-team down from central Georgia and was very congenial in helping the farmers, clear out the oak runners and palmettoes and split the rails for the new corn fields. Mrs. French has a very interesting article on that family.

This man, Jocham Williams was born when our young Republic was struggling for recognition as a world power among the nations of the earth. He was born when James Madison, our fourth President sat in the White House, and passed his youth while Old Hickory Jackson our first Governor was ruling the State. He lived all through the stormy period of the Civil War and to see our nation straightened out in unparalled prosperity afterward and almost up to the Spanish-American war.

He was indeed one of the sturdy sons of the pioneers, an ambitious and hard-working young man full of robust energy and ambition to survive. He assisted his father and neighbors, not only in building their new log homes, but also in chopping the trees, grubbing out the stumps and turning the rough soil mostly with a yankee plow and an ox-team. He heard the call of the wild around him, he listened to the ringing scream of the panther and wild-cat, the call of the whippoorwill in the Spring, the hoot owl at night and quite often the cry of wild game. Having no modern convenience, pleasure and entertainment as the radio, telephone, telivision, modern means of transportation, etc. He with his neighbors knuckled down to work to build up a livelihood for themselves and no doubt, to foster a vision that resulted in later progress and skill. Thus they lived for some years on the turnips, potatoes and corn they were able to raise, making their own bread, syrup, sugar and many other things, as well as curing their own meat.

Then came the troubled period that led to the Civil War. Everyone knew that trouble was brewing in the North and that the clash would eventually come. They clearly saw that the Northern rulers of government were determined to compel the Southern owners to free their slaves. Every breeze from the North brought tidings that the quarrel was becoming more turbulent, and that the clash sooner or later would come. Grandfather was indeed anxious to enter this War as one of his sons had already gone and two of his sons-in-law. But it seems that he was restrained for a time, probably because of his age or service in previous war. But the call finally came. He heard the call and as a brave man, a dutiful soldier and a good citizen, bade farewell to his home and hastened off to the support of his country and its cause. He enrolled at Ocala, Florida, on April 3, 1863. Attained the rank of sergeant and was honorably paroled at Madison, Florida, June 14, 1865. Although the cause was lost, the boys, we are sure were glad to return to their homes and to know that sweet peace had come at last. It was indeed a gala day when Grandfather Jocham came walking in. Just how he was transported, we have not been able to learn. But all nature seemed to extend a most joyous greeting. Although we claim no imagination or vision of a poet, yet we know that early morning stars shone brightly, the birds sang, the grass turned green, the old hen cackled from the hay loft, the calf zigzagged joyously through the pasture, the pigs circled around the barn, the puppies all yelped and the old dog tossed a ball of dung high into the air.

Grandma Becky prepared his favorite meal of hoe cake baked in the oven on the coals and collard greens with a side of smoked ribs, and coffee made from parched okra seed with a few bits of sweet potato roasted together. And soon she prepared him a couple of goodly sized catfish broiled on the coals, which he ate with a relish although the salt seasoning was indeed very sparing.

The real great are great at all times. Disaster does not crush their hopes. Prosperity does not make them vain. And so it was in Grandfather's case. Although many things had taken place that he didn't approve of, he set to work to restore and to get his farm and his home prosperous again. The neighbors seeing his industry and ambition and knowing that he was worthy and reliable, extended him credit and assistance. And soon things were moving toward prosperity and the dawning of a better day in the South. I often heard my good father say that he was a man on whose word you could depend, that what he promised today, you could depend on that tomorrow and that whenever he hired a man to do a day's work, he expected a good day's work and full value received. Once when it was necessary for him to go to Tallahassee to sign some papers in connection with his pension or government claims, his brother "Bloody" went along with him. Of course they could not get there in a day.

As they sat down to eat their evening meal, which as best I remember consisted of hard tack and cheese. Grandfather made the remark that it was the best meal that he had enjoyed in days, and that he would have been glad to have that good while he was in the Army. "What?" said Uncle "Bloody", you didn't have this good?" "Did were I was" he said, "Why we had cheese all the time. Good cheese, too, what time there were no skippers in it."

When the Williamses came to Baker County, they found the Taylor Family already in the Northern end of the County around the village which now bears their name. They found the Wigginses, Ponse's and Canovas around Sanderson and the Crews family spread all about over the county. It is difficult to say which came first, the Harveys or the Williams family, probably both about the same time. The Taylor family was led by their noble ancestor, Uncle Gordon Taylor, a very good neighbor and settler. Rev. Paul Taylor of Macclenny, Fla., has a geneology record of the Taylor family extending back two or three generations beyond the original comers. Also of the Brown, Raulerson and Knabb families, Elder Paul Knabb of Macclenny, has a very graphic and complete geneology. The Williamses were soon followed by the Rhoden family, which soon came to be one of the prominent families of the county along with the Harveys and Crewses. It is my opinion also that the Dowling and Kelly families came about the same time. A descendant of the Dowling family of Folkston, Georgia, I believe has compiled a wonderful history and geneology of this family. Anyone interested in this family might consult with J. I. Harvey or Aunt Thaney Harvey of Taylor, who could advise how to get in touch with the author or get a copy of the book.

Some two or three years after the War, Grandfather Jocham contracted a second marriage with a Mrs. Georgia Ann Anderson, widow of one Malachi Anderson. Of this union, there were born eight children, namely, General J., W. Henry, Randall E., and Thomas J. Williams and Julia, Lena, Ella and Missouri Williams. The only survivor is Aunt Ella Rewis of Macclenny, Florida. She has attended each session of the Williams family re-union and says that she has immensely enjoyed every one of them.

About the end of the year '95 grandfather contracted cancer of the throat and lungs, and as the use of anaesthestics and soothing stimulants were not as well known then as now, his sufferings were very great. He lingered on till the following spring, his neighbors rendering all aid possible in the hope of his recovery. Both his wife and ex-wife remained at his bedside till the end came. A very beautiful girl of fourteen stood in the doorway, ready to do his bidding, to bring water, to render any necessary need. She later came to be the mother of the one compiling this record. The end came at last on the 21st day of April and he was laid to rest on the banks of the middle prong of the St Marys river, where many a full moon has risen since, the hoot owls still yell, the whip-poor-wills call in the spring of the year and the rattesnakes crawl through the palmetto and sassafras hedges and over the famous Indian Mound known to the settlers from ancient times. Thus he passed away, sadly missed and long lamented by all his neighbors and not as a turncoat, a renegade or a traitor passing out unwept, unhonored and unsung.

Chapter II

Sturdy Sons of the Pioneer Soil

"Ill fares the Land, to hastening ills a prayer,

Where wealth accumulates while men decay."

"And by the way, William, what do you have planned for next Tuesday?" "Well, I was thinking I better finish breaking that new ground in the cow-pen pasture lane. Why, what's on your mind?" "I'd like to get out a few rails, if I can get a little help, I not only need some for mending, but I'm planning to build a new garden in the little field." "Well, that's right Lew, I believe this is your time for a rail-splitting Well, I reckon I can put off the plowing till Wednesday or Thursday" "I'll try to be there. "Do you have any promise of help?" "Yes, Jake Raulerson promised he would send some help, John Combs promised to come, and bring along your wedges and gluts, we will probably need them and what about a crosscut saw? Do you happen to have one?" "No, I don't have a crosscut saw at the present time. But I have a good buck saw in good condition." "Well, fetch it, and also the new blackjack maul we made last summer. It may come in handy."

The above conversation between our good neighbors, Uncle William Taylor and Uncle Lew Williams is typical of the industrial chat between the Williamses and their neighbors in the latter decades of the 19th century and first two or three of the 20th. It is impossible for this generation with paved highways traversing the county in every direction to the accomodation of rapid travel in speeding machines, to conceive what the appearance of the country was like in the latter decades of the 19th century. When the Williamses first came, there were only Indian trails for pedestrians and horse-back riders, and muddy and sandy roads for ox-carts and lumber teams. There was only one country town of any considerable standing at Sanderson, Florida. The name of Macclenny had not been heard of, but a village had been started near the location called "Darbyville". Of course, Olustee was to become famous later, as a battlefield of the Civil War.

And so the rough ground had to be cleared and broken by the sturdy sons of the pioneer soil using at first a sturdy type of cultivator known as the Yankee plow drawn at first by an ox-team which later was drawn by mules. The plow soon gave way to a type known as the Dixie plow. Then the trees had to be felled and shaped into logs for the homes of the settlers. They had to be peeled and drawn and dried and seasoned ready for the day of the house-raising or log-rolling, which was indeed a gala day in the community. For the farmers readily came together to assist each other, while the good women prepared them a sumptuous dinner of baked ham or roast beef, back bone and rice, potato pie, pumpkin pies, potato pone, collard greens, corn bread and coffee. This was also usually the treat at the railsplitting as in the incident mentioned at the beginning of this chapter, when Uncle William said, "Alright, Lew, I'll be there as soon as I get my coffee, you can count on me." There were also other occasions when the farmers very genially and socially came together to assist each other, as in a corn husking, a house moving, clearing of new land, then rounding up of the cattle and marking and branding in the spring of the year, etc.

When the new land was cleared and well broken, it next had to be laid off in rows, which was done by one with steady nerve with mule and plow well under control while he kept his eye on a stake containing a cloth or white object at the farther end. Then in the spring of the year the soil had to be made ready for the planting of the new crops. The grass had to be burned off or turned under early, that is, in the already cultivated fields, the fence jams must be wed as security against the burning of fields and woods, the over-growth of weeds and briars must be cut as well as the cornstalks and the cotton stalks, the latter sometimes being cut with a tool known as a cut-away harrow. In the burning of the fields they couldn't call out the Fire Department in case the fire got out of control, which didn't happen often as they were skillful and alert, using mops, pine tops and water to check the fire and save the rails if any took fire while it was crossing through.

The cotton must be planted on level beds containing guano or commercial fertilizer which was spread by a distributor or plow-like implement containing an oblong shaped hopper tapering at the bottom. The cotton seed likewise were placed in the hopper of a planter containing a small sweep for opening the drill and a wooden roller to cover the seed and pack the bed firmly. When the cotton came up and grew to a few inches in height, it had to chopped to a "stand" that is, the regular crop. Then it had to be plowed and hoed and kept in good condition till the time of picking which was usually about the latter part of August. September being the regular season. Sometimes the cotton patches were kept clean by a flock of geese owned by some of the farmers which kept the fields so clean that usually little or no hoeing was necessary. When the picking season came, this was usually a rushing time, quite often the fields becoming white again at the beginning before the other side was reached. Both short cotton and long cotton were grown till the appearance of the boll weevil about the time of the first World War when it rapidly declined and soon disappeared from Baker County. The picking sacks were made from crocus bags or flour sacks with a strap over the shoulder and belt around the waist fastened to the bags usually by tying to a knot containing a cotton boll or a peach seed. A good day's work for a good picker was usually from a hundred to a hundred and fifty pounds in white cotton. Of course, during a rainy season we didn't pick much, and if a shower came up which some of the children were glad to see, we would knock off for the day. Sometimes in the late afternoon, we would hear the boys hum the refrain: "Roll on boys, don't roll so slow, let's make another round before the sun goes down." This a reminder to get a hustle on. And sometimes in the early morning when the dew was still on the grass, we could hear the refrain of the turpentine Negroes chipping the pines between the sound of the hack: "Heye Judy, Hack!" Quite often, we heard the neighbors in the adjoining field or across the branch, yelling "Gee" and "Haw!" to the horses and mules and in the early morning the sound of voices long before daybreak, if there was to be a hunting party or working in the woods that day. Hustling times, I'm telling you, but the pioneer sons of the Williams family were sturdy and equal to the occasion.

The laying by of the corn crops were usually in June after the third or fourth plowing and sometimes after the crop was in full tassel and maturity of ears. Then the fodder must be pulled in the month of July. It was stripped from the stalks ,twisted at the ends and fastened on an ear or shoot in the stalk to dry or cure until late afternoon, when it was tied into bundles and hauled to the crib. An expert tyer must know three things: First, to judge the amount for feed-size bundle, second to tie securely that it would remain so and also how to hold the select wrapper blades so they wouldn't slip and cut the finger. If this happened, the blood would sometimes spin freely. About twelve or fourteen bundles of this fodder was usually a shoulder load to be carried to the wagon or the crib. The corn must be gathered in September after it was well dried. It was either broken and thrown into a wagon or cart or thrown on the ground that any weevils present might be taken away by the ants. Quite often also the ants were an inconvenience to the hands and feet. Of course one had to be on the watch for rattlers if the patch was in thick beggar weeds or velvet beans.

The means of heating the dwellings in early decades was a large open fire-place at the base of clay chimney and large enough to hold a great slab of wood, a stump or a "back-log." The "litered" wood and pine knots were usually placed by the boys on a rack beneath a window with a wooden shutter where Grandpa or someone sat handy to reach out from time to time and keep the fire blazing during a cold winter evening. The chimney was built of well-tempered clay chinked in between litered ribs with moss, hay or stubble. Usually much smaller at the top. We used to wonder how Santa Claus could come down such a chimney. Sometimes on a cold winter night out in the yard or field beneath a starry sky, we could see the black smoke rolling as from a furnace or locomotive. To be disturbed only by an old sow grunting out about the potato bank or the barking of the dogs, we had just sensed someone coming up the road or lane. Those were times of which the rising generation know nothing, but will probably be remembered by the seniors and elders as long as one on the planet shall remain!

Practically every farmer owned his own herd of cattle which roamed at will near the owner's home, in the woods and swamps thereby. They were usually rounded up in the early spring about the first of March and kept in a series of pens in a cowpen lane which when fertile, was generally used as a patch for the year's potato crop. The entrance or gaps of the cow pens as well as the pasture gaps were made of slip rails that slide back and to in the spaces made by driving crossed stakes into the ground and laying the regular rails into these. These were easily taken up when it was desired to move the pen. The milking season usually came about the first or middle of April after the cows had mended up somewhat on the new burns. Then went forth the milking maids with the three ringer tin pail tapering at the bottom, and brought it in brimfull, the flavor of which, I don't know when we will taste again. Rich butter was made when the cream had accumulated enough to fill the wooden churn which was large at the bottom and small at the top. It was churned with a wooden rod, having cross pieces at the end and being inserted through a hole in the lid. Quite often the clabber was so plentiful that it was fed to the pigs or given to some of the turpentine Negroes who came by for it. When beef was skinned and butchered, the farmer would usually send his nearest neighbor a nice mess of steak and sometimes an entire quarter, who in their turn would retaliate and send some to him. Thus they lived as true neighbors. Our mouths still water at the memory of the fresh beef liver that we enjoyed in those days. The fresh tripe was a wonderful dish while the hash made from a head properly dressed with the flesh parts, tongue and brain all seasoned and stewed together made about the best hash that ever was after our opinion. After the quarters had hung for some hours, they were cut into sections and either smoked like salt pork or salted and dried in the sunshine. It was delicious either way.

The marking and branding time of the calves and yearlings usually came about the middle of May. They were branded on the rump with a red hot iron bearing the initials of the owner, and also marked in the ear with a special cut styled: "Smooth crop in one ear, staple fork and upper bit in the other," etc. Owners had their marks and brands registered in the Clerk's Office in the Court House.

The butchering of the hogs was usually done in the late fall or early winter. Some of the farmers raised their pigs around the home, but a good many of them kept hogs wild in the woods. They looked after them in the spring and summer months, and in the fall, they brought them in covered wagon or cart, turned them into peanut fields with corn, velvet beans or chufas until they were fat and in good order for bacon and lard. Then they were killed and scalded in hot water that made it easy to remove the hair and make the skin clean and white. After which they were hung on a gamble stick, drawn and quartered.

The surplus fat was trimmed and thrown into the boiler for the making of the lard. This was obtained by pressing or extracting the pure grease while the residue formed the "cracklings" part of which were eaten, the rest being an ingredient which was left in the pot and made lye soap. The lean meat of the hams and shoulders and occassionally tender lean strips of the loins were ground together for the sausage meat. Then the surplus hams and bacon were prepared for curing by smoking with hickory, bark or soft pine. Although no modern process of curing or cold storage was known then, an experienced butcher was very skillful in preserving his meat. If any was sold, it was usually weighed with a pair of scales called a stillyard, which consisted of a horizontal bar balanced by a pee of two, four or eight pounds, etc. Cotton was usually weighed in the same way.

The digging of the potatoes usually came about the first of December, after the frost had killed the vines. The vines were skinned off and the beds plowed down, throwing out the potatoes which were then thrown into piles. After drying they were assorted out, the larger ones being placed in long triangular banks consisting of boards covered with an embankment of earth and a flooring of pine straw. The smaller ones or culls were then collected and placed in round piles to be fed to the hogs or used as seed for next crop.

The grinding of the sugar cane usually occured about Thanksgiving or in some cases, it might have been postponed till about Christmas times. We had several varieties of cane, such as big and little Simpson, green cane, red cane, ribbon cane, etc. To prepare it for the mill it was necessary to remove the blades from the stalks which was quite often a bad job, especially when there were stickers in it. Then top it, cut it down and place in piles. Then it was hauled to mill which consisted of two or more steel rollers joined at the top by notches or cogs and into which was inserted a central axle fastened by a clamp to an extensive wooden beam or sweep that was drawn by a mule or horse. Beneath the rollers was a wide wooden ledge containing a trough down which the juice ran to a barrel or container with a cloth that served as a strainer to clear it of trash as it trickled into the barrel. The sap was then placed in a large iron or copper kettle, which when it was full and the "litered" knots blazed up beneath, began to roar and in about two hours, the texture of the newly made syrup had formed. This was dipped up with a laddle, strained again corked in jug or bottle containers against next year's supply.

Thus with plenty of corn in the crib, smoke house full of meat, bank full of potatoes and syrup and sugar in the sugar house, the sturdy sons of the pioneer soil felt their security of food supply for the coming year. Didn't matter to them whether they had an immense bank account, or a wallet so cumbered with greenback that it was burdensome to carry, so long as they received their denims and homespun shirts in the spring, and their barlow and Brown's mule, many of them, they were still ready to carry on as the daring sons of enterprise, without which it is impossible to conceive how our modern industrial civilization could have been achieved.

Chapter III

Some of the Prominent Families

"There was a man sent from God and his name was John"—(Jocham).

UNCLE SUSE WILLIAMS

Uncle Suse Williams, son and grandson of Confederate Soldiers.

It has been said that he who writes the history of a Nation or a people colors it more or less in the tinge of his attitude, according to the prejudice or admiration of his subject. If he be an admirer, he is prone to set them forth as angels, saints or heroes, if hostile, as rascals, thieves or cut-throats, possibly. It is not our purpose in these pages to present this clan as a people of outstanding inventive genius, nor of excessive religious zeal, neither as aristocrats nor humanitarians in the broad sense of the term, but simply as plain folks of the common people of the every-day type of the honest, hard working, good natured rural neighbors of the latter part of the 19th century and the beginning of the twentieth. I ask the reader please to be courteous and liberal to note well the title of the present chapter. Place emphasis on the word "some" which implies that all are prominent families, but those of whom we write in this chapter, are in our mind and something on the end of our tongue that we wish to tell.

First, we might ask the question: What is a Family? When the Almighty was nearing the completion of all his labors on the 6th day of creation, beholding the wonders and glories of all of them, as the Masterpiece and crowning glory. He said: "Now let us make man in our own image." And so He did, and then when He saw him walking lonely in the beautiful garden in which He had placed him, He said: "Let us make for him an help-mate, a wife-man a woman." And in the process of time, children were born to this pair and thus came into existence, the first family in the world, the oldest, most time-honored institution on the face of the globe.

Then as the families began to increase on the face of the earth many of them grouped themselves around a universal patriarch, or common ancestor, originating the first tribe or kindred clan, or as the Romans put it, the race curia. Further on, the curias united to form villages, towns or city states. Still further down the stream of time, these were grouped into races, nations and a universal civilization originating from a common race and ultimately a common family. However, we think of the family in its definite sense as that unity of a husband and wife with their children or that group of people having in common the same father and the same mother. Other families originate from these and within the cycle or span of a life-time, there has come into existence quite a multitude upon the face of the earth, all the descendants of a common family. Thus we have in the descendants of the Jocham Williams Family hundreds of families and more than 5,000 descendants. Of the following families stemming from the original family, it is our purpose now to say a few words.

ELIAS

Family of Uncle Bud Williams

Uncle Bud was born in 1836 and passed his entire life in Baker County with the exception of the time he served as soldier in the Civil War. A hard working, industrious and ambitious farmer. A talented man, a good singer and teacher of the rudiments of music. He was an upright and trustworthy Christian gentleman who held the confidence and esteem of his contemporaries attested by the fact that he was one of the outstanding officers and civic leaders of the county for a long number of years. We were not able to get a record of his career in the War. Anyone interested in this, might learn something from the Annals of the Soldiers of Florida and from the legends retained by his descendants. His first wife was a Miss Jane Combs, his second wife a Mrs. Sarah Ann Crews, the mother of his children and the last wife a Mrs. Stella Lyons. The said Sarah Ann Crews was the daughter of John Crews and sister of Uncle Roger, John and Elias Crews. One of Uncle Bud's daughters, Lettie married into the Rhoden family and a number of their descendants live at Marietta, Florida. Another survivor, Cousin Stella lives in Jacksonville. But the most numerous branch is of the oldest daughter, Sarah, who married into the Harvey family and a goodly number of their descendants still live in Baker County, not only of Harveys, but of the Crewses, Lauramores, Bartons and others.

Uncle Buddy Williams

Uncle Buddy was born in 1853 and christened James Jasper. He reared a large and honorable family near the Taylor Community in the northern end of the county. A man of devout religious feeling and upright Christian character, he was loved and respected of all his neighbors who consulted him as to the proper time for planting various crops according to the signs, etc. His judgment was usually very sound. He seems not to have been quite as humorous a man as Uncle Bill or Uncle General Williams but he laughed heartily at a good joks and was always ready to seek advice or information from anyone who might be able to enlighten him on any matter in which he was interested. The following ancedotes we remember in connection with him: Once when he entered Uncle Tom Taylor's Store, he said to him: "Well, Buddy, what's on your mind? What would you have?" "Well, for one thing," he said, "I'd like a big fat hog and him every bit lean." Upon one occasion when Dr. Dyess was called to visit his sick wife, company came over as best I remember, Eddie Combs, Miss Ida Wiggins, the village teacher and others, while Uncle Buddy was out in the field hoeing corn. He was sent for when someone brought in some water melons. Taking his half of melon, Uncle Buddy drew a chair up near the Doctor and said to him, "Doc what's good for a fellow that seems not to have much appeitte every morning, and no pep and can't hold out to work long?" Said the doctor, "Uncle Buddy, a good many times in cases like that, about as good a thing as you can do is to take a bath with good hot water and soap and get you a shave and haircut." Uncle Buddy was so taken aback in startled surprise, I don't think he asked the Doctor any more questions.

Uncle Buddy was the father of a number of children three daughters and three sons of whom are still living. One son, Harney J. married into the great Rhoden family, reared a noble family and was one of the progressive farmers of the county of the early decades. One daughter, mother of the Lyles Family, lives in Miami. Two sons, Ped and George P. Williams live in Macclenny. The latter served the county well as one of its faithful officers for a number of years. One son lives in Hialeah, Florida and two daughters in Jacksonville.

Aunt Polly Thompson

Two Thompson families of descendants, A Greek, a Combs and a Raulerson family as well as a Crews family, which is a family in a family are the descendants of Aunt Polly Thompson family. The progenitor of the Crews family was Mary or "Aunt Zulie" who united in marriage with a Roger Crews, son of Uncle John Crews. In this union, there were 12 children, of whom two sons and six daughters at this writing still survive. More than 300 descendants in this family—exceeding any other of grandfathers 163 grandchildren in off-spring. The Rev. Willie Crews, one of the best country preachers that we knew in olden days was a member of this family. He held the loving esteem of the church as long as he lived. It was ever an inspiration to see him shaking hands with the brethern from right to left as he entered the church grounds, then when he entered the Sacred Stand and opened his Bible before him, and his features began to light up and his voice to pour forth a volume of ringing words, it seemed that a supernatural visitation from another world had come down. When he passed away, the Church said: Surely a prophet has walked among us.

A very noble citizen was her eldest son, Uncle Carroll Thompson. Like Bro. Crews and Uncle Buddy, he was upright and of unquestionable character. Ever sincere and conscientious, he was a great civic leader. The voters of the county showed their confidence in him by retaining him for a long number of years as Clerk of the Court in Baker County. The Henry Combs and Jake Raulerson families have numerous descendants in the county. The descendants of the Greek family live in Jacksonville. Some of them have served on the Police Department and other civic positions of the city. A daughter, Mrs. Mittie Tipton, is at present a member of this department. She has manifested such civic interest and proven herself so trust-worthy and capable that she has not only been retained in her position, but given promotion from time to time.

Aunt Sarah (Prevatt) Crews

This is not only a double family, but also the largest of all, nearly 1200 descendants. Aunt Sarah was born according to statistics, in the year 1834. It seems, just prior to Grandfather's entrance into the territorial Indian Wars. She first married Uncle Jim Prevatt who seems to have lost his life in the Civil War. We first heard that he was killed in battle, but later informed that he died in camp of pneumonia. Of the descendants in the Prevatt family, there is still one survivor, namely, Cousin Liz of McAlphin, Florida. There are varying estimates as to how old she is at the present time, some think that she is now around 112 while all are agreed that she has long ago passed the century mark.

The writer has had the pleasure of visiting with her three times, upon one occasion, having dinner with her. We sat beside her at the table and she would say, "here, have some rice, take out more of the French fries, have some beans," etc. Wanted to see that we had plenty. Of course, I did not ask her to letl me her age, remembering that young ladies feel embarassed to be asked to tell their age.

Aunt Sarah married as her second husband, a John Crews which as we have learned was the son of Uncle John Crews, father of all that were connected with the first families. The descendants of this wonderful family are some of as fine a people as you will find anywhere. I spent the night with Cousin Johnny Crews of McAlphin. An interesting gentleman, indeed, who can relate lots of traditions in the family some of which I'd be glad to have the time to tell. Another interesting member of this family whom I visited is Cousin Johnny of Lake City, son of the late Joseph Milton or Dink Crews family.

The total number of descendants in the Prevatt-Crews family around 1200.

Uncle Bill Williams and His Descendants

Born in 1841, he was probably named for his grandfather, another Bill or William Williams. He seems to have been about the third or fourth child born into the family. He was an ambitious and hard-working chap, but his opportunities for the formal learning of the school were indeed limited. Nevertheless when the War came on between the States, he was anxious to enter, and without the consent of his parents, enlisted in the Confederate Army July 13, 1861. He said he was anxious "to give the Yankees a fit and chase them into the ocean." He was almost fatally wounded in the battle near Greene's Farm, S. C., in September of 1862. (See "Soldiers of Florida" page 96 in Jacksonville Library). According to tradition, a bullet passed entirely through his body and upon being taken to the hospital, it was necessary to thrust a silk handkerchief through his body to relieve the contamination of the flies from the wound. It is said that two sentinels passed as he lay on the battlefield and that one said to the other, "Say, this rascal is not dead yet, believe I'll give him another tap to make sure." "No," said the other. "Let him alone, he's dead as Hell, he'll never see daylight again." "But he does have a good pair of boots, believe I'll have them." They were in a hard knot, but he finally succeeded in the loot after dragging him for some distance.

He finally recovered and returned home and lived until September 23, 1903. He was an upright and honorable man, possessing something of the true chivalry of the sons of the Southland, noble in his bearing, polite and courteous with all. Like President Lincoln, he seemed to have a joke or story to fit every occasion and seemed to enjoy a good joke himself. He was married to a Miss Courtney Raulerson, in which Union, there were three sons and three daughters, all of whom are deceased. This being the first entire immediate family to pass away. Some of his sons seem to have imbibed something of his spirit of humor. It is said that one day while riding in the woods, Uncle Walt said to Uncle Suse, "Suse, there's one thing you know and one thing you don't know." "What's that Walt?" "You know I can whip you allright but you don't know just how quick I can do it."

He always declared that he didn't believe in ghosts or spooks. Only a silly and absurd notion, he said, in some folks imagination. Someone said to him one day: "Now Walt, suppose that some night when you are coming in, a haint would hem you up in a tight spot, where your escape might be very difficult." "Well" he said, "I expect that right then and there would be the time and place where some body would get hurt, now certain."

Uncle Suse used to entertain us on a winter's night with the story of "The Great American Bed-bug." And of course, Roy Williams amused us with the story of the little boy who called out in the night, "Grandma, what's that thing I hear go whitty whatty, whitty whatty, tanny buddy, tanny buddy." One of his daughters married into the Noble Taylor family and another into the Dugger family. Their descendants are proving themselves good citizens and successful business leaders.

Uncle Lew Williams

Before the firing of the guns of the Civil War had ceased in which his father and two brothers had a part, Uncle Lew was born, probably about the twelfth in a family of 21 children. He married into the Noble Rhoden family and from this union there were 12 children, five sons and seven daughters. According to reports, your Uncle Lew was a very strong man in his young days. They say that he could easily hold a wild yearling and carry a bag of fertilizer under each arm down the cotton row. He was one of the industrious and progressive farmers of the Taylor section of the county, and always ready to lend a helping hand to any of his neighbors in time of need. They said that it was ever an inspiration to see his smiling face and to shake hands with him when he drove up to Church on Saturday. It is no wonder that when he passed away, they said there would never be another Lew Williams. His son, Charley still lives with his family at Olustee. His daughters, Nora Dryden, Maud Harris and Minnie Combs live with their families in Jacksonville.

Uncle Torry Williams

He was born in 1850 and christened John Commander. He was the father of eight children all of whom still survive at this writing except one son and one daughter. He was a good and congenial neighbor and it is said that he taught his sons to walk and talk straight and endeavor to make an honest living. He was punctual to his religious duties and devout in the Primitive Baptist faith and contended that the one called and chosen to the election of grace would surely be crowned in the end. Said one of his neighbors to him one day, "But Uncle Torry, suppose one should repent and a limb would fall on him on the way to being baptized." "Did you ever hear of a case like that," said Uncle Torry. "No, don't know as I ever did." "No, nor you never will" said Uncle Torry. "For God said He gave the one who believes on Him power to become a son of God and you couldn't kill him with a sledge hammer."

One of his sons, James D. or Uncle Jim Williams as a young man used to entertain his friends with a song: "Sticks and stones may break my bones, but I'm going to live in Highway till I die." And his later life has shown that he may do that very thing. For he was converted to the Lord and immediately entered upon the ministry, and for many years has been serving as a faithful, sincere and conscientious pastor of a number of churches. He is also Presiding Elder of the District Conference which position he has held for a number of years consecutively. Part of the John Williams family lives in Baker County, the remainder in Jacksonville and other places. The descendants of the Sam Williams family live in Lake City and Jacksonville and one daughter in Michigan, I believe. Cousin Jesse lives with his family in their pleasant home in Eagle Lake, Florida. It has been our privilege to visit in their home many times in the recent past and always a pleasure and delight to go there as they make you feel welcome and always ready to talk of the good old times of olden days.

Oh yes, the noteable Henry and Mamie Dugger family also belongs to this clan. Like the Roger Crews family another family within a family. Quite a number of descendants, many of whom still reside in the county. We still treasure the memory of Prof. Johnny Dugger one of our best rural teachers of the good old days. He told the boys about 1912, that the horse and buggy days were about to come to an end and that they would all soon be riding in automobiles and that the comforts of city life would soon be in the country. A Nostradamus with a forecast but he did speak, and Lo, it has come to pass!

Uncle General Williams

Born in 1865, he was called "Sonny" or "Buddy" until he was asked to choose a name for himself. "I am General Jackson", he said. And accordingly, he was so christened. Though he had no college education nor military experience, he was very jolly, friendly and good-natured. Like Uncle Bill, he loved a good joke and somtimes indulged in stories of the Believe-it-or-not type. Of course, most of us believed them readily bcause Uncle General was relating them. Upon one occasion when he returned from a hunting trip, he was telling of seeing some large doe-buck with antlers that he was sure would have measured six feet from tip to tip. Said Mr. Knabb, who happened to be listening at the time, "Now Mr. Williams, you say that the horns of the buck were six feet in span, how on earth would he get through the trees if they're that wide?" "Well," said Uncle General, "that's the buck's business, ask him about that." Upon another occasion when he jumped from the top of a tall stump, he said that he was going to land on a large diamond back rattler, and that he decided to defy gravitation by making another rise while still in the air so as to miss him.

Like Uncle Bud, he was talented in music and singing and took a leading part in the Convention work back in the days of the Class Choir and Temple Star. Only one branch of his descendants, the Rosa Davis family, resides in the county at present, the others living in Lake City, Miami and Pearson, Georgia. It is indeed a pleasure to visit in the pleasant homes of Cousins Eddie and Hardy in Pearson, the mind ever being recalled with happy memories of the time when we used to be so happy and so poor. This family deserves credit in the leading role of supporting and attending the family re-union, carrying the banner of the largest number in attendance every time except one or two, I believe.

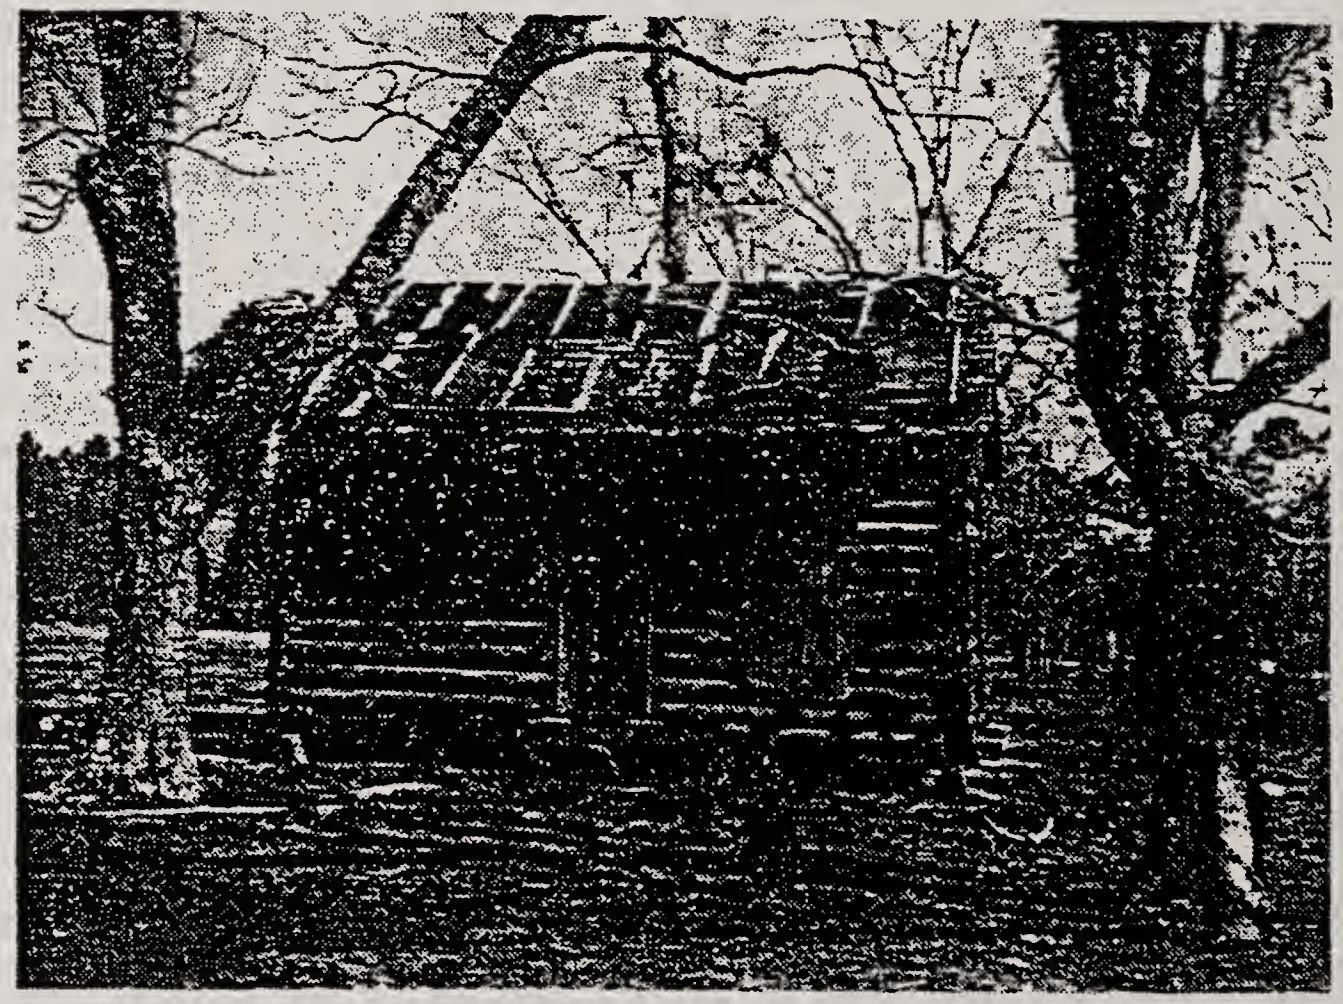
Uncle Tom Williams

It seems that Uncle Tom was the last born of grandfather's twelve sons. He was a fine looking young man and full of the ardor of youth and a romantic and dashing spirit. There is a legend connected with him relative to the one time or the first time he realized it might be good to pray. I disremember who first invented the legend, whether it was Uncle Bill or Uncle Samp Brown. But anyway, Uncle Tom was coming in late one summer night when there arose a tremendous thunder storm. He could tell that the horse and wagon were in the road only when there was a flash of lightning. But as the noise of thunder was terrific, he was almost deafened. So he decided it might be a good idea to call on the Good Master. So kneeling down by a stump, as best I remember, the prayer went something like this. "O Lord, I do not call on Thee many times, but if it be all the same to you, I would appreciate a little more light and a little less noise, Amen!" He disappeared from the county as a young man, his friends not knowing for a long time where he was but Lloyd Rewis or some one finally went down South and brought back news that he was still living and doing well. He had the misfortune of seeing two of his three wives committed to the State Hospital for the Insane, one dying there and his last wife, according to our understanding being there at the present time.

Lonnie Williams, like his father was very jolly and full of life. He believed in having the best horse and buggy that he could equip when he went out courting. There is a story that he came in one night when the moon was shining down the chimney in the cat's eyes. He of course thought he saw two coals of fire on the hearth. But when he decided to light his ciragette by touching a match to one of these coals, that grouchy old cat soon let him know that he was badly mistaken. Some time ago we had the pleasure of meeting and visiting in the home of some of Uncle Tom's descendants through his last wife. We never felt more welcome nor royally entertained anywhere than in the home of these fine people. There were three daughters in this last union, the eldest now being deceased and the youngest living now in Mississippi, I believe. To the best of our knowledge, these are the only living heirs of the third generation, Jocham's grand-children, who are still under fifty years of age.



Old Farm House of Yesteryear

This old home is one of the surviving relics in Baker County. Homes like the above were used by some of the poorer people early in the twentieth century.

Chapter IV

Rural Life in Former Decades

"Oft in thought, there comes to me,

The memory of the time when we all used to be

On the farm out in the Countree,

So happy and so poor,

Now we've about all moved into town,

We see the City's sights and drink its pleasures down.

But the happy is no more."

"Say, Charlie, you knew about the party tomorrow night didn't you?" "No, I didn't, whereabout, tell me about it." "Over to Hardy Johns' goin' ainh you?" "Gosh, I wouldn't miss it for anything in the world, if the old man'll let me have the horse and buggy. Guess he will. I always try to take care of them." "Who all will be there? Will the Dowling girls be there and the boys from Ticky River?" "Yes, I'm quite sure they will all be there." "I hope that drinking crowd from Cuiler won't be there. They broke up the last party, you know and we missed the fun. Yes, I'll try to go and gee, I hope the old man don't think of anything else when I get this plowing done. I have a fast stepping creature here and should be through two hours by sun." "Well pick me up at Gordon Dowling's about 6 o'clock. I'll be looking for you. Bye."

O yes, those were indeed the good old horse-and-buggy days when we lived with our parents out in the country so happy and so poor, when we plowed barefoot in the wide open dusty fields, sometimes walked two or three miles in all kinds of weather to attend a one-teacher country school with readin' writin' and 'rithmetic taught to the tune of the hickory stick, the Blue-back spelling book, Milne's arithmetic and Coleman's wide-back geography, and sometimes wandered out into the woods after a heavy down-pour of summer rain when the branches and streams were singing with an abundant rippling flow and all ditches and ponds were overflowing their banks, and we listened to the deafening but musical chorus of the bellowing frogs, the regular refrain accompanied by the deep bass gutural and shrill tenor of: "Di-tettle, Di-tettle, Di-tettle, Ma-a-ank!"

Quite often we attended the merry parties over at the neighbor's where we played such games as Evening walk, Drop the handkerchief, and Marching round the level, etc. Quite often we attended the moonlight candy-pulling at the cane grinding. The candy was made by boiling the newly made syrup to a certain texture and completing the process by pulling and then—some more pulling. For the more you pull the deeper the set and the longer you pull the whiter it gets. And the taste—um! um! O girl, something out of this world. O yes, those were the days when grand-mother churned that rich golden butter from delicious cream brought in two-quart jars from the dairy in the back yard, to be eaten on biscuits as big as a cat's head. The churn she generally used was described in chapter two. Those were the days of Virginia custards, cinnamon pies, huckleberry tarts and luscious potato pone flavored with good old home-made brown sugar, nutmeg and spice, good old country sausage seasoned with the best grade of red pepper and rubbed sage, juicy hams and middlings all done up in red pepper, salt and borax hanging yonder in the smoke-house, the taste of which the world has not known since, and boy—I don't know when it will again.

The early homes of the settlers, as we described in earlier section were built of logs with wide clay chimney fire-places. There was usually a rack for the wood just outside beneath a window which opened with a wooden shutter, where Uncle Suse or someone usually sat to keep the fire blazing of a winter's evening. Quite often at those times, we were entertained with some wonderfully charming stories. We like the type that started off with "Once upon a Time" etc., and ended up with, "Thus they got married and lived happily ever after." Boy shut your mouth! Some of that philosophy made a living reality, might not be bad for our world today, do you think? The kitchens were also built of logs with their own fireplace and the cracks between the logs usually filled with fresh hens eggs and we looked forward with keen appetite to the coming of breakfast, especially on Sunday morning when they were most often served rather abundantly. The floors were kept spic and span by being scoured quite often with hot water and home-made lye soap using a scrub mop made by twisting corn schucks into holes bored in a thick slab of wood that was fastened on a handle. When the splinters in the wooden floors began to rise, they then judged that the floor was clean and rinsed it in clean water. Then when it was dry it was sometimes sprinkled with clean white sand brought from the ford of the branch or ditch. The regular house-brooms were made by platting shredded long-stem palmettoes together and fastening them securely or by taking a bundle of broom sage straw and fastening securely. Later the log dwellings gave way to frame buildings and the clay chimneys to brick and today the tendency seems to be to leave them out entirely. The early houses were built on a foundation placed upon wooden blocks of certain dimension which were in turn laid on pillars or "sleepers". The door-steps were also of wood which had to be repaired from time to time. Some of the houses and farms of the poorer settlers were indeed scantily furnished, but there is one thing that we remember. The Singer sewing machine. Practically every home had one. We remember this back to Grand-ma's time. Must have come in about the time the Spinning wheel went out. Most every home no matter how humble, had a machine, some feather beds, a horse cart and a dog. These with the old pipe of clay were to many contented farmer Stephen Foster's "Home, Sweet Home."

O yes, those were the days when we quite often attended the merry-making parties that were alluded to in the conversation at the beginning of this chapter. After playing a number of merry games such as "choose your partner" in which the refrain as best I remember led by Carroll Raulerson and others, went something like this: "Here comes two pig spuealers, pig squealers we are, a-courtin' your daughters so fine and so fair, can we get lodging here, Oh here, can we get lodging here!" Johnny or someone called out: Roll out the barrel and bring on the round dance. Then whether the tune was, "Zigg-zagg" "Cork Screw," "Thread the needle" or "The Arkansas Traveller" I have about forgot, but anyway at the master's call, the couples joined hands high above their heads, and then with a ring-ding Johnny and a ping-sing Sally around and round they all do go! Gala times, I'm telling you and unless someone puts them on record, I fear they will soon be forever gone from the memory of man! The dancing as a rule went on to the accompaniment of a lively fiddler with someone assisting by beating the strings with heavy "litered" splinters. Though when Jesse Tyre held the instrument beneath his chin, this was not necessary. For he was indeed the John Carson of Baker County. I cannot remember all his tunes, but one I do remember goes something like this: "Stay all night, stay a little longer, dance a little more when your legs are stronger, pull off your coat and throw it in the corner, don't see why you can't stay a little longer." Later I added a stanza of my own, somethink like this: "Going to the back to get a drink of water, then I'll be back to swing your pretty daughter, reach out on the rack and blaze up the fire, then we'll have the fiddle played by Jesse Tyre". Thus the party came to an end. Some time when the moon was going down, we could hear the horses galloping and the wagons rattling over the hills, and the boys singing all happy and looking forward to the next party. Those were the days of Lila, Annie and Pearl Taylor, Sophie, Emmie and Nova Dowling, the Rhoden girls, Minnie, Maude, Edna and Ola Williams, Minnie Kelly, Verdie, Lizzie and Hattie Dowling, Patie Crews and others. Those were the days of Curtis, Lascham and Auzzie Dowling, Sylvester Taylor, the Crews brothers, the boys from the camp, as well as the boys from Moniac and South Georgia, elsewhere or other places.

The first-class means of transportation in those days was by means of horse and buggy. This was a four-wheel vehicle geared to the horse's back by a set of harness which supported the shafts which served as a rudder, the buggy being drawn by the horse by means of a set of traces or thongs fastened to axle of the crosspiece of the shafts and the heims on the collar at the other end. A set of leather lines inserted through rings in the harness and attached to rings in the bridle bits served as reins to guide the horse. The other methods were with horse and wagon, horseback or walking. Often we rode to church with pallets spread in the back of the wagon. Often in crossing a swollen stream of a branch where there was no bridge, we had to lift out legs or move up further in the cart to keep from getting wet as the back end would sometimes dip under the water. At this point, we happen to remember a legend of one of the rural teachers of those good old days, of Prof. William (Uncle Bill) Walker. At that time, he was boarding with Mr. and Mrs. Col Brown, fine residents of the Taylor Community. So on a Saturday night, he wished to go to see his girl and asked Mr. Brown if he could favor him by loaning the use of his horse and buggy. "Yes, you can get it, Mr. Walker, I'm sure you will take care of them." This was during a rainy season when the streams were well swollen. Prof. Walker passed the river without difficulty in the afternoon, but when he returned at night, lo and behold it seemed that the tide had risen, for when the water began to come up in the buggy, he saw that he would have to stand to keep from being drowned. Then when he looked and could see only the horse's head barely above the water, he knew that he was in a current. When he reached the other side, he saw he was lost and that all roads looked alike. So he decided to trust to the horse to lead the way in. After running over a number of trees, logs and stumps, he finally saw a light in the distance and soon the old horse turned up a lane and how glad he was to find himself safely arrived! He could breath more freely, but he felt cramped and stiff and feared he might be taking a cold. We had many such rides in the good old days, but old Pete would usually get you there if you'd give him time. Horseback riding was a delight to many boys, some even riding without a saddle. Of course Walter Sweat used to say that a good way to kill a hawk was to ride on horseback in circle around him, and that he would keep his eye fixed without changing, that he would surely break his neck!

The boy's chief delights were in the fields and woods. Nature was his teacher, quite often his doctor, the saddle was his throne and the old swimming hole or 'wash hole' his bath tub. Some of them were excellent swimmers and divers when the swimming pools were over their banks. They would run make a plunge or "P-loog!" and you would see his head pop up on the other side.

Fish and wild game were plentiful in those days. It was usually no trouble for anyone to catch a mess of fish in the summer time in just a few minutes. Even when the streams were quite full we could sometimes see and hear them striking and jumping in all directions. We knew that the waters were teaming with life. Then when the moon would rise and the owls began to yell we could roll them in, pike, catfish, mudfish and perch or warmouth and occasionally jack and trout. Neither were they choice in the bait used. Usually frogs were plentiful and this was all that was needed. We remember catching a large mudfish with the tongue of a duck and a warmouth with a piece of bacon rind. Sometimes in full water seasons we could catch them in ponds or ditches and quite often see large perch or bream floundering and flapping in the wiregrass in the woods. We remember upon one occasion of seeing Uncle Suse catch twelve large catfish from a hole in the woods about the size of a wash tub near Chinquapin Bend with seemingly no connection near the river stream whatever. Some neighbors depended on the fishing streams for their smoke house or meat supply. I remember hearing my father tell how Uncle Jake Anderson reared a family of twelve children across the branch with an ox and a bull-tongue scooter. This was because fish and birds were plentiful in those days. Plenty of doves and quails visited the fields in the fall of the year, and we enjoyed several messes during the season. Sometimes the boys built traps of wooden slats and caught them by placing corn or peas on the treadle which would cause the trap to fall when the bird picked up the grain. Then the birds would be accumulated in a large coupe till the day when we would be regaled with bird pillau and fried birds. The boys loved to chase rabbits, wildcats or coons. At night the dogs would tree the coon and while one of the boys would shine his eyes with a bright light, another would shoot him out. They would twist a rabbit from a hollow with a long keen switch. And sometimes, they would try to get one from a gopher hole. But this was dangerous as you never could tell what else was in that hole. In the early morning when we smelled the saturating odor around the fields or yards, we knew that the dogs had been out chasing a pole-cat.

The cooking in the earlier decades was done chiefly on a four-burner iron stove with a large baking oven. Later the range system came into general usage with a tank or water reservoir and more cooking space. Some cooking in the earlier decades was also done in the open fireplace. Grandma Becky and Grandma Georgia Ann did lots of baking in a large fireplace over an oven with fire underneath and live coals on the lid. They also used a split or crane for roasting the meat which was a bent hook suspended to a horizontal bar before the blazing coals. The farmer usually insisted on three meals a day. The typical breakfast being a menu of black coffee, grits or 'hominy' fried bacon, biscuit and syrup. The typical dinner consisting of fresh vegetables especially green peas with smoked bacon or dried bones, corn pone, sweet potatoes and dried or fresh beef in the summer time and dried peas, greens and fresh pork in the winter time. Artificially cooled beverages were practically unknown in those days. In fact, about the only time we had any iced drink was when we were freely regaled with barrels of lemonade at a country barbecue or picnic. Sometimes a huckleberry pie was popular in early spring and fruit or watermelon rind preserves in the summer. These were sweetened with syrup or brown sugar which was also homemade.

Mattresses were also homemade, some of them from moss that was sterilized and well-cleansed, others from goose feathers, the geese being kept for that purpose and also for picking the grass from the cotton fields. We never knew of any being raised for their meat or for commercial purposes. Not many folks were fond of the eggs even. Many clothes were made as well as practically all towels, pillow cases and bed sheats. Spreads, blankets and comforters were also made for the beds. One of the happy scenes that comes most vividly to our memory is the women's evening quilting party. Several of the good women of the community came together both matrons and maids sometimes. And a lively conversation was usually concurrent with the quilting, which made the time pass very quickly and joyously. Some of them would indulge a little in their Three Thistles as they went along, which they seemed to enjoy very much, others partaking a Sweet Scotch or Railroad Mills, each one so using, having a special cup or retainer in which to deposit the excessvely saturated salava from time to time. When the chat on one topic ran out, as best I remember, another was introduced by one of them asking the question: "Say, did you ever know that So and So was the father of Betty's first-born child?" "Yes, I heard that years ago. Aunt Lucy told me about that when I was just a child." Then another would bring up something like this: "I don't know what's come over old Mrs. So and So. You know when I came out of church the other day, she wouldn't look at me. She was looking the other way all the time." So I'm afraid that in many cases, the quilting came to an end ahead of the conversational gossip.

For music, there was the old-fashioned organ. Not many homes, however had these as there were not many who could play. The Grand Ole Opra was the occasion at night when the boys came together with their banjos and harmonicas or "mouth-organs" and occasionally one with a guitar or violin. Some of them could entertain us to a fare-you-well with "Dixie", "Yankee Doodle", "Lil' Liza Jane" and other favorites. When some one came along with an Edison victrola of the long horn type, the children were very much delighted. Although some of them had picked cotton all day, they would sit up late to listen to one of these Edisons or "gratifones". The boys would hurry around, feed the horses, get in wood, tend to the pigs and other chores in order to hear the "gratifone."

The time of grinding the cane and making the new syrup was usually a time of much merriment. There was generally plenty of visitation from the neighbors during these times. Some of them would stay at night till the last round was taken up, gossiping, chewing cane, telling stories and enjoying themselves in a very sociable manner. When some old swain got off a good one, the boys would usually laugh till the rafters rang. Upon one occasion of a merry-making at a cane grinding at Uncle Boss Combs' Charley Pfeiffer, a jolly citizen from Jacksonville, came out and joined in the fun. Seems that he delighted in giving baffling problems especially to those considered smart or with sense enough to teach school. Upon this occasion, he said to Uncle Bill Simmons, the County Superintendent of Schools, "Prof. Simmons, they say you are pretty smart. Now tell me, when eggs are selling at twenty cents a dozen and meat at ten cents a pound, how many teeth are there in a handsaw?" Then to Cousin Walter Dowling, a gallant sportsman and to Prof. Walter Dopson, a rising young teacher of those times, he said,. "Now, Walt suppose you are hunting in a swamp and disturb a squirrel in a hollow cypress. He sticks his head out at a hole near the top of the tree, and in three seconds out of one near the bottom of the tree and in a second and a half at the one near the top again. How long would it be before he would be sticking his head out at both holes at the same time?" They were welcome to go out to the mill and drink as much cane juice as they liked. If there were not enough in the bucket, the boys were always ready to push the sweep around and squeeze out more. A quaff of this beverage on a cold winter night was a very delicious drink. As we look back upon those happy years, it is our steadfast opinion that next after Adams Ale from the spring, the universal beverage of mankind, a draft of this delicious liquid was the most pleasing, satisfying and thirst quenching drink that ever went down the throat of man. Sometimes the boys on these long winter evenings would roast potatoes in the hot beds of coals or broil immense strips of fresh beef or pork livers which were indeed delicious. Some of them also would barbecue or broil a chicken in the coals, that is, they would take a young chicken, remove the entrails, chink in pepper and salt and then without dressing or removing the feathers, would wrap it in wet plastic clay and bury it in bed of coals. Then when the clay was baked and dried, they would remove it, the feathers being removed at the same time. They said that no one who had never eaten chicken cooked in this manner knows the real flavor of broiled chicken. I couldn't say. I never tried any.

Sometimes some of the boys would prepare a fermented or distilled beverage from the cane skimmings called "moonshine." Some of them had their own stills in their back yard and made the liquid not only by the light of the moon at night, but quite often in the daytime as well. Seems that the laws were not as strict against the practice then as they are today. It seems also that crime and drunkeness were no worse then than now. We are not implying that drunkenness was unknown then for there has been intoxication from the time of first fermented beverage, and we fear there will be as long as it is used. But the great majority especially of the older citizens always seemed to know when they had enough and could return home sober and with balanced judgment and upright conduct. Instinct of reason and good sense seemed to guide them without the restraint of either law or Gospel.

The men and boys were called to dinner from their labors in the field or woods by someone with a sounding voice or by a dinner bell which was sometimes an ordinary cow bell and sometimes a tower bell fastened to a limb of a tree or upon a tall stump. Sometimes, we were told that they would use a horn which was reminiscent of the old-time bugle horns and conch shells that were used in Revolutionary and colonial times.

The farmers in accordance with Southern courteous hospitality were very congenial in inviting their neighbors and friends to stop over with them when passing by or through, reminding them that the string of the latch hung just outside the door and that they were welcome. When one rode up on horseback or drove up in a wagon, the good host would say, "Get down and come in" or "Get out. Take your horse and put him in the lot and feed him." At church, immediately after services were over, the ringing voice of Uncle John Taylor and others could be heard, "Allright folks, all that will go home with me, you are welcome and the door is open. Just come right along now." Often when the visiting guest spoke of leaving, the host would say, "Don't be in a hurry, stay all night with us." Sometimes they would take him at his word and remain over not just for a night but often for three or four, even when it was necessary to spread pallets on the floor for the accomodation of the children. Happy times of jubilation when no one seemed to be in a hurry nor to worry nor to wonder who would pay the bills!

The majority of the schools of the decades from 1880 to 1910 were of the one-teacher type. The log buildings of former decades with fireplaces had now given way to frame buildings with glass windows and wood burning heaters. The boys took turns in gathering the wood and pine knots for these heaters on cold days. The school desks or benches were home-made usually of rough lumber, endurable but very uncomfortable. The school term was usually about three or four months, in some more fortunate cases, four or five months. Some times it would run for two months in the summer when corn was "laid by" then close for the cotton picking season, then reopen again in the fall. All text books and supplies in those days were furnished by the parents which was difficult for some of them with a large number of children. Some times the books would be passed on to the younger brothers and sisters upon entering the grade unless they were too badly worn or dogs-eared in which case new ones would have to be purchased. Of course, there would also be times of gaiety and delight at school, not only times for melon cutting, candy-making or peanut parching, but we would sometimes "say speeches" on Friday, stage a contest of some kind or have a spelling match. Sometimes when the weather was favorable, this would be given outside in the open air. And of course with an Ern Barton on one end of the log and Ed Harvey on the other, I suppose that was all that mattered. At least it was the world that we knew then. The last day of school was a time of much merriment, plays ,recitations, dialogues with a sumptuous and delightful picnic. At this time, the patrons chose the new supervisor and sometimes the teacher for the next term.

Many of the sermons to which we listened in those days were quite lengthy, many of them in the nature of an oratorical speel. Quite often some of them would be about two hours in duration. We well remember upon one occasion hearing one of the ministers upon entering the Stand say to the congregation: "Well, brethren, I'm going to have to ask you to be a little patient with me today. I've never known," he said "to stand over six hours nor under two." But he failed to make his two hours that day as he soon collapsed due to his age, excessive zeal and the warm weather. Usually only the preacher's head could be seen above the elevated pulpits in the old type buildings of that day. Upon one occasion a primitive Baptist minister with long beard wound up his sermon and chanced to see Johnny Peas' horse loose and feeding on the ground outside, with the bridle from which he had disengaged himself, hanging to an oak limb. Of course, he wished to inform Brother Johnny without calming down on the ardor of his sermon. So he moved to one end of the stage and in sing-song fashion, conveyed it to him thus: "Oh, Brother Johnny, your horse is a-loose-ah, loose-ah, loose-ah, Oh Brother Johnny your horse is aloose-ah, loose-ah, loose." Of course Brother Johnny understood and soon recaptured his horse and fastened him more securely. It always seemed to me that many of those primitive Baptist prayers were musical and poetical, or powerful spiritual zeal that could really touch the bone. Many who remained for the entire services, took them seriously and were emotionally aroused, some to tears, some to fervent "Amens!"

Well, we see that our time is about up and that we had best close this chapter before you run out of patience or go to sleep. So the good old days have passed away. Gone are the horse and buggy days. Gone are the days of the blue-back spelling book, the Prayer and Praise hymnal, the Class Choir and Congregation and the Sacred Harp, but the memory lingers on. And whether the good old days gave way to better days,

I leave you to be the judge and draw your own conclusion. But we leave you with this challenge: Make the reconcilliation if and when you can between the assertion of the wise man in the Bible who says: That which is that which has been, and that which has been will be again and there is no new thing under the sun. And the assertion of the poet who declares that "the old order (of established things) is forever changing, yielding place to the new".

Chapter V

The Family Reunion

"And forsake not the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is."

History

On the fourth of July of the year of 1952 while visiting in the pleasant home of our noble Cousin, Hardy Williams in Pearson, Georgia, I mentioned the idea of a plan for a general Williams Family Re-union. During a conversation I told him that I had been thinking of such a proposal for some time and asked him what he thought about it. Cocking his head sideways for a few moments in pensive meditation, then abruptly, "Let's have one," he said. "But Cousin Hardy, you know there's quite a generation of us by now, some twenty families with their descendants, and the Anderson Family takes in some more." "That's all right," he answered, "You set a time and place, and if no one else goes, I will meet you there, and we will call it The Williams Family Reunion." So we talked the matter over with Cousin Eddie who gave his approval also, and then taking cousins John J. and Ira Williams into consideration, we organized ourselves into a general arranging committee and designated the time and place of meet to be at Ocean Pond, near Olustee, Fla., on Easter Sunday of the year following. The said Sunday dawned a most glorious, lovely and beautiful day, as would take a poet to describe, with the sun shining down upon a calm and placid Ocean Pond nestled there in the primeval forest hammock of lovely murmuring pines, near Olustee and near the consecrated spot where a battle of a famous War was once fought. We were indeed gratified by the attendance that poured out upon this occasion, a crowd estimated at something more than a thousand. The registration records showed a tally of around four hundred registered descendants, while there was a goodly number present, who failed to register. Registered visitors were 150. All the descendant families were represented there except one— a feat which has not happened since. Here are some statistics of the first registration:

1. Daughter, Mrs. Ella Rewis of Macclenny.
2. Forty-one grandchildren.
3. One hundred and eighty-seven great grand-children.
4. Seventy-five descendants of fifth generation.
5. Twenty-nine descendants of sixth generation.
6. Sixty-one in-laws.

At this Re-union, we designated a publicity committee and a memorial committee to determine the restoration or improvement of the private cemetery on the banks of the St. Mary's River, in which the mortal remains of our Grandfather, Jocham Williams, along with others were interred. We also appointed an arranging committee to determine time and place for meeting for the following year. It was decided to meet again and the same time and place in the year following. Then another committee was appointed who decided that for the following year of 1955, the meeting would convene at the Guilford Davis place at Margaretta, Fla. It was then transferred back to its original home where it convened constantly until April of 1960 when a seven member committee decided that it would convene for the year, 1961, at the site of the old Suse Williams place near the middle prong of the St. Mary's River near the burial ground of our ancestors, mentioned above.

It was enacted that the government would be in the hands of an Arranging Committee who would designate the time and place of next year's meeting, at which time they themselves become the Executive Committee, assuming general management and carrying out any formal program they may think expedient. We had instructed the arranging committee to use forethought and wisdom in the choice of time and place of meeting, to suit the interest and convenience of the great majority if possible, if we expect to make this occasion a continuous affair, and one to be looked forward to with joyous anticipation. And in selecting the members, all families should be given equal and due consideration from least to greatest.

Purpose

Then what is the purpose of a Family Re-union. Viewing the matter from a philosophical standpoint, we feel that there are certain definite objects to be obtained. First of these, as the name implies, is a uniting or meeting again, a re-assembly of getting together, renewing old acquaintance and friendship, and seeing again the members and loved ones of the family that we have not seen perhaps in some time. As we spread over the earth whether our inclinations and vocations have called us, we seldom see each other sometimes, unless called together upon the sad occasion of a funeral. But a day of meeting and greeting our cousins, brothers, sisters and other relatives, talking, laughing and chatting through the gay hours, enables us in fancy to live over again the past, in the memory of the time when we all used to be "So happy and so poor"

FAMILY REUNION SCENE

Scene at Family Re-union of 1960 showing Helena Smith, first comer into 8th generation in lap of Aunt Ella Rewis, last survivor in first family of twenty.

Some one may ask "Well, what is the moral value of this, may we not live as great and virtuous lives if we never see each other again in this life after we have separated?" We shall have more to say about this matter under another heading. But now for the second object which is, that we may be able to learn more definitely, just who our relatives are, and what is the degree of relationship to certain ones that we know to be members of the Family. I have recently heard the expression "Well, I have known So and So all my life, but didn't know until now that we were related. And others, "Well I don't know until the family re-union that Sally or John was a cousin of mine." And I feel that there is a goodly number of us and myself for one that didn't know that we had relatives among the Arnold family down south until the beginning of the Family Re-union. Now someone might ask the question: "Well what is the moral value of this? What is the misfortune if we never know who all our relatives are?" More of this under another topic but now we introduce the third object to be obtained. This is an excellent opportunity to familiarize ourselves with the pedigree of ancestry or the Family tree as we say. That is what many hold to be the central and sublime object in the purpose of the Re-union. Many do not know through which line their cousins or other relatives have come and sadder still many do not know the line of their own descent further back than the third or fourth generation perhaps. Many do not know the proper names of their own grandparents nor the maiden names of their grandmothers. Thus when I asked Aunt Ella Rewis who her grandparents were, she couldn't tell me. But when I asked if she thought it possible that one, Bethaney Rewis, might have been her grandfather, her features lighted up and "Why that was my old grandmother," she said, "Law I've heard my mother refer to her mammy, old Bethany Rewis more times than I have fingers and toes."

Familiarity with the family tree might be very valuable indeed in many cases in enabling us to obtain the data relative to status of our own birth, which might be valuable and necessary to prove our own identity and enable us to secure the social security that we might need later, old-age retirement, facts pertaining to military status and other matters that may be highly important.

Now in the fourth object, we shall attempt to answer the questions left unanswered in the first and second consideration. The fourth object being that we might learn something and as much as possible of the manner of living, the progress and welfare of those to whom we are related and concerned. If we have intelligence as human beings, we should know that we are bound by God's Holy Word, by the law of loyalty and consanguinity and finally by the law of justice and humanity to be concerned with the welfare and the happiness of those to whom we are related by blood and the household of faith. No man liveth unto himself and no man dieth unto himself and we are after all, our brother's keeper. Therefore in anyway that we might be helped by the example of those who are more fortunate than ourselves, it is our duty to learn of this and to give it due consideration. In any way that we can render aid and assistance to those less fortunate, it is our duty so to do. For what are men better than sheep or goats that lead a blind life within the brain, if knowing God, they lift not hands of prayer for those whom they call neighbors, kindred and friends?

Now the fifth and final object to which we call your attention: We should learn something of the traditions, the moral precepts, the ideals and the legends of the family that have come down to us. Many of these, no doubt, in the establishing of high ideals, and worthy aims should enable us to lead, happier, more prosperous and nobler lives.

So in conclusion, we beseech you to support the Reunion by your attendance. Plan and make arrangements to be there is possible. And remember, you do not have to be dressed as for a pageant, a graduation, nor a bridal procession to attend a Williams Reunion. Just come right along just as you are, in the same sunshiny, smiling and happy disposition as when we first knew you in days of old. We'll be glad to see you. Many of the sub families are beginning to have their own private reunions which is indeed gratifying and we trust that they will encourage their descendants to perpetuate the practice down to succeeding generations. We have been privileged to visit some of these re-unions which we have enjoyed very much. One of them that stands out in memory was the visit to the Arnold Re-union at Palmdale. We were charmed and delighted to meet so many of our noble relatives in this splendid family. We made the acquaintance of Mrs. Maude Albritton, an oustanding descendant in this family, a most lively and interesting person, entertaining and inspiring to talk with her. We were in the home also of her daughter, our noble Cousin, Mrs. Gladys Vaught in Frostproof, where a welcome seems to be ever waiting and the door always open. Then last of all I visited in the home of our beloved Cousin, Mrs. Ada Roberts, a descendant of Aunt Betty Harvey Family. These visits recall memories that will not soon be forgotten. We still recall the enjoyment of the bounteous spread at the Arnold Re-union and especially the extra menu of swamp cabbage and barbecue beef that taste of which, I'm sure we'll long remember.

So we are looking forward to seeing you at the re-union. Till then, may the blessings of our good Heavenly Father be upon each and every one, that he may crown all your efforts with success and that in Him you may find the crowning joy and sweetness of eternal rest and peace!

Chapter VI

The Geneology

"And thou shalt number the children of Israel by families and by tribes."

In the following pages, we have attempted a geneology or record of the descendants from our Grandfather Jocham Williams. And what is a geneology? Mr. Webster says, "An account or history of the descent of a person or family, an enumeration of ancestors with their children and families in successive generations." This the, record of John Daniel Williams' descendants comes to be a true geneology, even though it does not contain all data relative to date and place of birth, marriage, death etc? We leave this to the real geneologist, the Church and the individual family. We are concerned with here is a list of descendants of this the most outstanding family in the history of Baker County and one of the most outstanding families of the world. One of the most interesting, prolific and progressive families of which we have taken note, it soon intertwined itself in marriage with all the other leading families of the county, and then to marry into some of the other descendant families.

We concieved the idea of compiling this record in the same way as we conceived the Family Re-union. We felt that the time had come when we should be drawn closer together in the bonds of unity, sympathy, knowledge of relationship and association one with another. We felt that the time had come for the fulfillment of the prophecy that: "In the last days. He would send the Prophet Elias who would turn the hearts of the children to the fathers and the fathers unto the children" that we should thus come to be vitally concerned in the welfare of our relative kindred, in the household of faith, and in the hastening of the time when there shall be "One Shepherd and one Fold." Among those whom I counsulted for advice before beginning this work, I pause here to make reference to two of them. The first of these Aunt Ella Rewis, the sole survivor of the immediate family, who said to me "Well, I don't see anything wrong with it, Eddie. In fact I think it would be a good thing, especially for future generations, no doubt would be of great benefit to somebody, but you will find, I'm thinking that there will be some work in this for somebody." I next went to Cousin Carrol Raulerson, a grandson of Aunt Poll Thompson and a man for whose judgment I entertained high respect. He said to me, "Well, Ed if all those families turn in those names that you are asking for, both the living and the dead, you will have ten thousand names to put in that book." I told him I didn't think there would be that many. "You'll see," he said. And the result seems to show a medium between his over-estimate and my under estimate.

We have endeavored to carry out this compilation as far as practical in order of ages of the descendants, taking male line first in every consideration. We have tried to make a complete list up to the last born baby at time of taking census. If any names are omitted, we ask you in all fairness to please be sure that they were turned in by your geneology reporter, before you blame the record. We regret that names of many descendants are not enrolled because neither we nor their nearest relatives in contact were able to learn of their whereabouts. We humbly apologize in advance for any name in error or for any mispelled name. In cases where descendants have married their relatives, please look for their families under the father's family record. This for the purpose of keeping the enumeration more accurate.

We need this record for the following reasons: First, we should have it because many do not know to which tribe they belong nor on which book they should register at the Re-union. This should help them to register more accurately in the appropriate record. Somebody said there were twelve tribes of jacob, but we have now twenty tribes of Jocham.

We should have it because many do not know who all their relatives are. They do not know how many generations at present time in this great family. At the last Re-union, we had the first comer into the eighth generation, one little Sylvia Smith a descendant of our noble Cousin, Mrs. Sally Pickett of the Pickettville Community in Jacksonville.

She is indeed a lady of very pleasing personality and interesting conversationist with many of the qualities of our good Aunt Sarah and no doubt of the grandparents.

We need this record because many of the clan do not know about a goodly number of the others who are also members of it. Many do not know who some of their cousins are nor how they are related to others. We need a census of enumeration of this very noble and important family. Although humble in origin, many of them are truly prosperous today, not only in ordinary employment and occupation, but some are owners and managers of hotels, jewelry stores, shops and factories, orange groves, oil wells and cattle ranches.

We should have it as a treasured memorial of our beloved ancestors and relatives who have passed away. We are indeed fortunate as a family to have had noble parents and grandparents who served their country well in war and in peace, whose presence was once so nobly inspiring and precious to our hearts, but one by one they passed away, leaving us their descendants to battle and struggle on in a world of upheaval and change, especially in the last quarter of a century unparalled in all former history. Unless we do what we can to retain them in most profound and sacred memory, their traditions and their ideals, how can we hope to deserve the name of grateful and respectable humanity?

In the last analysis, we cannot but think that ancestors passed on would give their approval to this work. I can imagine grandfather Jocham would say, "Well go to it Ed, if you think you can do it." I believe that Uncle Suse, Uncle Lew and Uncle General would approve of it as well as Uncle Carroll Thompson, Preacher Willie Crews, Johnny Dugger and others. So if you too approve this move, support it by the purchase and ownership of one of the records. Retain it as one of your most treasured documents. And it is my abiding conviction that if we continue to live true to the noble sentiments and ideals of our ancestors, we shall be a happier people under the sun and beneath the Stars and Stripes, a people with steadfast devotion to loving loyalty, religious veneration charity. liberty and justice to all!
